

SOFT OF COAL KING LEOPOLD'S WIFE & RULED BY FEAR THAT KING LEOPOLD WILL LEGALIZE MORGANATIC ALLIANCE.

By Publishers Press.
BRUSSELS, July 5.—The prospect of a morganatic union of King Leopold and a woman of the commoner aristocracy has become the subject of the most intense interest in Belgium. The king's wife, who has been married to him for some years, is now expected to be crowned as queen. The king's wife, who has been married to him for some years, is now expected to be crowned as queen.

Religious Ceremony in 1902.
Leopold's religious marriage to the baroness was performed in October, 1902, a fortnight after the death of the queen, Mary Henriette. At that time the baroness was Mrs. Van der Linden, widow of a Belgian coal owner. Her father was the pastor of a Protestant church.

BOSTON ITALIANS PAY TRIBUTE TO GARIBOLDI

By a parade in the afternoon and a monster mass meeting in Faneuil Hall in the evening the Italian residents of Boston yesterday celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the great Italian general and patriot, Giuseppe Garibaldi.

There were 2,500 Italians in the parade, which marched from the North End to Faneuil Hall, where, in front of City Hall, it was welcomed by the Italian Society of the Board of Aldermen. At the City Hall, it was welcomed by the Italian Society of the Board of Aldermen. At the City Hall, it was welcomed by the Italian Society of the Board of Aldermen.

PARTNERSHIP AND THE SLIDING SCALE

About a year ago the SLIDING SCALE Act was passed. The principle of this bill is to provide for the Public MAXIMUM SERVICE at MINIMUM COST, and to allow the Company to INCREASE its DIVIDENDS as prices are REDUCED.

Our PREDICTIONS have been FULFILLED. THE ADVANTAGES of Gas have evidently APPRECIATED to the Public, and a large INCREASE in sales has resulted. The reduction was made last year to 50c, STILL LOWER PRICE has just been established, owing largely to the increase in business, putting gas in Boston on a 50c BASIS.

THE FINANCIAL BENEFITS of the Act to the Public are DEMONSTRATED in the fact that during the coming year our customers will SAVE ABOUT $500,000 as compared with the price two years ago.

Up to the present time, however, the Company has not, and will not for a year longer, share in these FINANCIAL BENEFITS. But we believe that we have earned and obtained the GOOD WILL of the Public, which is VASTLY MORE IMPORTANT.

It will be our EARNEST ENDEAVOR to continue to merit these EXPRESSIONS of CONFIDENCE, and we shall consider it a FAVOR in the future, as we have in the past, if you will notify us promptly if you are in any way dissatisfied with the service you are receiving.

Now that it's all over we presume that the money you'll have left after paying the doctor will be available for the purchase of proper Summer clothing, for instance.

TAFT, AT MANCHESTER, SIDESTEPS POLITICS

Secretary of War, on Visit to North Shore, Forgets Presidential Boom Temporarily.

Secretary Taft passed a short time yesterday at Millbury, visiting his mother, Mrs. Louise Taft, and last night reached the home of the boardman.

The secretary would not discuss the Taft Presidential campaign, anything that had been a political significance.

"I am a very busy man," he said. "I really haven't given political much thought lately. I talk on such matters as the Government's crusade against corporate abuses, I usually do so in the form of a lecture, but I don't discuss political action about Government business, but must be very guarded in what he says."

Here are some of the things Mr. T. Rife said:

"I know nothing about John D. Rockefeller."

"I am in favor of peace. The meeting of the representatives of the great nations of the world at The Hague cannot but have good results. It is not probable that the conference will not be barren of results."

"It would be better to leave the selection of the place for the next national Republican convention to the national committee."

"I am anticipating with much pleasure, the coming of the next national Republican convention, which will be held in New York City, Sept. 10, and I expect to reach Manila in time for the opening of the new Philippine assembly, which will convene in the city within ninety days after July 30, the date of the election."

The Waiter's Tip Is No CHARITY

It Is Simply Fair Payment for Good
Service, Nothing More

The International Society of Hotel and Restaurant Employees will try to abolish the system of "tipping waiters." Members of this association take the ground that the giving and taking of tips is a degradation of manhood, that it is offensive to the pride of the waiter, and should be abolished.

If the waiter decides by some united action to abolish the tipping system, and to replace with higher wages, and consequently higher prices to the customer, the present system, that is their affair. But we feel bound to say that we doubt the feasibility of the undertaking.

We do not admit that there is any DEGRADATION or any CHARITY whatever in the giving or the taking of a tip.

A man goes into a restaurant and is waited upon by a capable, hard-working citizen, every bit as good as he is. It is distinctly understood that the man who goes to a restaurant has two charges to pay. It is his business to pay his charge to the restaurant keeper according to the rates on the bill of fare, and to pay the waiter ACCORDING TO THE CUSTOM AND ESTABLISHED RULES IN RESTAURANTS OF THAT CLASS.

When a waiter receives his so-called "tip" he is simply being paid for work he has done, AND HE IS GETTING ONLY WHAT HE IS ENTITLED TO. It is his duty to be polite to the customer, and it is the customer's duty to be polite to him. It is his duty to be grateful for the payment, and it is the customer's duty to be grateful for good, polite and efficient service in return for that payment.

If the customer fails to give the customary tip, he neglects his duty, and he is a fraud.

If the waiter neglects to give good, careful and polite service, he neglects his duty, and he is a fraud.

We doubt very much whether abolishing the tipping system would be a good thing, even under the most favorable circumstances. Suppose that you abolish the tip, increase the pay of the waiter to a reasonable amount, and arrange so that the owner of the restaurant may not suffer, by giving him an increased price in proportion. What happens? The waiters are experienced, energetic men, not mere servants, but capable business men, alert, with good memories, quick minds. Do you think that men of that kind WILL WORK AS WELL IF YOU TAKE AWAY THE INCENTIVE AND THE EXCITEMENT OF SPECIAL EARNINGS?

Do you think, for instance, that the man who owns the restaurant would work as hard, be as much interested, and give as good service IF HIS DAILY AMOUNT OF MONEY WERE GUARANTEED TO HIM, NO MATTER HOW WELL HE WORKED OR HOW BADLY?

If you do away with the tip, can you expect the waiters to be patient with all the different human kind of donkeys that they have to wait upon? Nothing is more touching than to see an educated Frenchman patiently listening to the "French" of some man from Sandusky, Ohio. Nothing is more pathetic than to see a well-educated head waiter trying politely and gently and tactfully to keep the suddenly rich gentlemen from taking his soup before his oysters.

While the waiter is expecting special payment for politeness and good nature, he is more apt to treat gently and kindly the variegated assortment of modern American guests that alone make the expensive restaurant profitable and possible.

One of the biggest hotel owners in New York City lived for a while with his family in his hotel on Fifth avenue. He found out the real meaning of the tipping system.

He selected the very best waiter in his hotel and decided to have that waiter wait upon his own family exclusively. He asked the waiter how much he was making altogether in wages and in tips, and agreed to pay him MORE THAN THAT AMOUNT for working in his private dining room only. The waiter was pleased—at least he thought he was—and went to work in the new way gladly.

But at the end of a few weeks he told the owner of the hotel that, while he appreciated his kindness, he would prefer to go back to work with the other waiters in the restaurant. He said there was no fun in working with only a SURE thing. He had learned, like other business men, that the fascination IS IN THE UNCERTAINTY. And his life had become a bore and a nuisance the moment the UNCERTAINTY, the excitement, the gambling instinct, so to say, were removed.

The hotel owner understood the thing and granted the man's request, sending him back to work on the tip system. The feeling of this man would be the feeling of thousands of other waiters if tips were abolished and dull routine salaries were put in their place.

Does not the man in business for himself, even when he is losing money, work more cheerfully and energetically than his salaried clerk who has a certainty? Isn't it well known that the salary system, while it simplifies matters for the employer, is very unsatisfactory? Are not the dull, idle, dissatisfied men those that ARE WORKING FOR FIXED PAY THAT DOESN'T GO UP OR DOWN?

Don't you know that a pedler with a little tray of neckties or shoestrings in front of him, IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF, STRUGGLING FOR HIMSELF, SUBSIDED BY NO UNCERTAINTY, HAS REALLY A MORE INTERESTING LIFE THAN THE SALARIED MAN, GETTING HIS FIVE, OR TEN, OR TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OR MORE PER YEAR?

Take away the tips from the waiters AND YOU TAKE AWAY THE UNCERTAINTY, THE EXCITEMENT FROM THEIR LIVES, and you will get an inferior lot of men waiting at the table, instead of the superior men that do the waiting.

If the tipping business needs regulating, REGULATE IT, but this is not the time to try to abolish it. As long as you ask intelligent men to do work which is disagreeable, requires patience, is often rewarded with foolish complaining and abuse, you must give those men every possible INCENTIVE to do the work. The only incentive that civilization has developed is money; THEREFORE GIVE THEM MONEY. And let it be given in the way that makes it uncertain and attractive.

Let the waiter, if they please, regulate the amount of tip; let them issue official announcements as to what is expected in restaurants of various classes in return for meals of varying prices. Any attempt to abolish the tip would be a failure.

The thing for the public to do is to realize that there is no CHARITY in giving a tip; that it is simply honest payment for honest service. When waiters are inefficient it is the duty of the employer to get others.

When a man is in a position to give a customary tip he should stay away from the place where such a tip is customary.

There is no more excuse for cheating a waiter out of HIS MONEY than for cheating the proprietor out of HIS.

One third of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warning.

Wouldn't the freezing ripple fool?
Exceedingly cool and nice?
A SEAL doesn't wear any silly clothes.
Not even a bathing suit!
When it would die, dip it in grease!
And we pity the poor dumb brute!
A SEAL doesn't live in a tenement
Nor sleep in a stifling bed!
It tilts the hours on a drifting fog,
With a snowball under its head.
No threats of an ice trust ruff its sleep!
No heat deprives its dish!
When hungry, the seal slips into the deep!
And returns with a frozen fish.
Oh, let us away some swiftness!
When the humid heat we feel,
And with wild hurry! dash down the bay!
To float with the flippers seal.

1. MRS. MARK—Now, E. Z., on my way down town I'm going to stop at the City Transfer Company's office and order them to call for my trunk. If they call before I get back, let them have it, but don't give it to any one else.
2. E. Z. MARK—Yes, that's the trunk. By the way, what company are you working for?
GURSHOB GUS—For the City Transfer Company. I generally carry a uniform cap, but I blew into the river yesterday, and I ain't had time to get another one. Oh, yes, I'll get the trunk to the depot all right.
3. E. Z. MARK—Very well, my dear, I'll look after it.
GURSHOB GUS—Here's my chance to oop a trunk full of valubles.
4. EXPRESSMAN—Trunk, lady! I'm from the City Transfer Company.
E. Z. MARK—Why, one of your men was here half an hour ago and took it away. You conspired with him and stole it from me. This is my district, and no other driver ever comes here.
MR. MARK—I see it all, E. Z. You've been dupped again. You've had the trunk stay in town another month. All my dresses were in that trunk.

THE last international congress of specialists on tuberculosis in New York a woman addressed the august body. This woman was an American-born Englishwoman, and she is the author of a book called "The Way to Breathe." It contains a few simple rules for the prevention of that dread disease, tuberculosis, which is one of the health of the growing race not the least of the scientific books written by all the physicians of the world.

Emily Noble is the name of this woman, and the name is a synonym for life and work.

So impressed were the doctors of the national congress with what Mrs. Noble said to them that they proceeded to make her an honorary member.

Learn to Breathe
M then how to be well. She has learned from the science of that wonderful lung how to prevent and cure consumption, and she has come back to give America "specialties" on the subject of breathing.

Speaking of it, she says:
"It is a fact that that fact even in these days every child is born with a full lung capacity. It is a fact that in the first few years of life, through care and training on the part of parents and teachers, and, as a consequence, it grows up using only about one-third part of its lung capacity."
"Unfortunately, through lack of knowledge, the child is taught to breathe no better than the children of the mother of breathing, the majority of them using their upper chest breath instead of the full lung breathing."
"The rhythmic breath, which every one is born with, is lost, through sedentary, rhythm of the whole body, by which the lungs gain more electricity, and a rhythmic death of the diaphragm is completed with each breath."

Correct Breathing
"RESPIRATORY exercises and correct breathing are absolute preventive measures against tuberculosis."
"It was my good fortune to be sent from San Francisco to India in the year 1900 on important investigation work connected with light and electricity, and in their relation to disease."
"I went with my mind full of all the latest scientific methods against the dreaded 'Hindus' I got my first illumination at the Madras Station, 'method of breathing' was the name of it. I was met by a native gentleman, who spoke better English than you speak, and
